

MASON DEFENDS LOW POSTAL RATE

Senator Says Deficit Would Increase by Publications' Elimination.

DECLARES PROFITS
EXCEED EXPENSES

Attorney Urges Committee for Smaller Tax So As to Increase Revenue.

Expressing the conviction that the postal deficit would be three or four times greater, but for the results of the advertising carried in magazines and other periodicals, former Senator William E. Mason, of Chicago, submitted an argument against any increase in second class mail matter rates to the House Committee on Postoffices and Postroads today.

Mr. Mason appeared in behalf of the Currier Publishing Company, and other periodical publishers, basing his statements on figures of Mr. Currier and on the knowledge he himself had gained on postoffice revenue affairs when chairman of the Senate Committee on Postoffices.

Publication Defended.

Mr. Currier's summary, as submitted to the committee, is in part as follows: "Investigation will prove my assertion that if monthly publications, which according to recent figures comprise most of the second class mail, were entirely eliminated, the deficit in the Postoffice Department would be three or four times what it is today.

"The profit comes in the returns from magazine advertising, which creates a wonderfully large amount of first, third, and fourth class postage. The advertisements in monthly publications call for circular matter, catalogues, and advertising data, as well as mailable merchandise."

Statistics showing that it was proven in Congressional investigation of 1902 that Mr. Currier's publications alone had produced returns of more than $40,000 of first, third, and fourth class postage, while the postage paid for carrying the magazine was only $4,000, were next laid before the committee.

"Is this making money for the department or is it losing it?" asked Mr. Mason, on behalf of Mr. Currier. "I believe there would be a falling off of about 60 per cent in the revenue of the department if the postage paid for carrying the magazine was only $4,000, were next laid before the committee."

Money Well Spent.

"The people of the United States have more to do, come more in contact with and are more vitally interested in the Postoffice Department than in any other feature of the United States Government. This department costs us less than several other departments in Washington, but if the postal deficit were $100,000,000, I maintain it would be money well spent for the education of the masses and the encouragement of business."

"The rural free delivery system costs the Government thirteen millions of dollars annually, and this is included in the postoffice expenses. Shall we, then, because it adds to the deficit, about $10,000,000, stop the rural free delivery system? No well-posted man would think of such a thing.

"The publications which are carried at second-class rates increase the revenues of the department enormously in excess of the department's deficit. Rather than to increase the rate of postage for carrying these publications, the department will be best served by decreasing the rate, and increasing still further the revenues created by them to the credit of the department."
